

Mission:

To enable Justice (Outcome Equity) and Freedom (Fair Access) by

- reducing racist stereotyping and
- decreasing racial discrimination

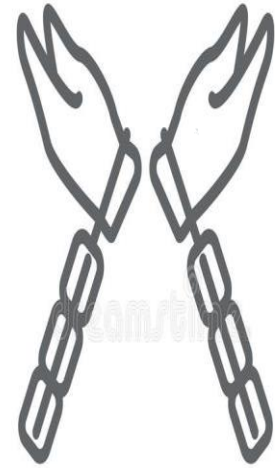

even in initially or on-going unjust and unfair places.

Although burdened by startling costs of more than 400 years of racial and socioeconomic oppression, we nonetheless are discovering ways and means of enabling Justice and Freedom in places least expected—predominately low-income Black neighborhoods and communities as well as in middle-income minority Black neighborhoods and communities.

Our Humanizing Initiative reduces racist stereotyping and racial discrimination to enable

FREEDOM WITH JUSTICE

in neighborhoods, communities, states, and nations that are minority or majority Black.

South African Tree of Life

where we notice that all humankind belong to the same tree—males and females, Blacks and Whites, children and adults—which captures and expresses our concepts of Justice (Outcome Equity) and Freedom (Fair Access).

When Justice & Freedom flourish, children, families, neighborhoods, communities, boroughs, cities, counties, states, regions, nations, and the world are made whole:

- mentally
- physically
- socially
- educationally
- occupationally and
- economically.

These outcomes map convincingly onto key Development Goals of the United Nations.

Breadth of Experience

The Center has delivered human services to 81 municipalities of Pennsylvania's Allegheny County; in Pennsylvania's Greene and Washington counties; and in Chicago, IL and Tallahassee, FL.

The President of the Center and his graduate students have conducted domestic research in nine states (California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee).

The President of the Center with his associate Dr. Eugene Tull have conducted international research in seven nations in the Caribbean (Aruba, Barbados, Dominican Republic, St. Croix, St. Johns, St. Thomas, and US Virgin Islands) and four nations in Africa (Botswana, Namibia, South Africa, and Zimbabwe).

The Center's Chief Executive Officer Dr. Lenall Thomas also has conducted training in the African nation of Liberia.
